Today's activity is based on the groups used by More House to bring in new people for such houses and to the classes connected to them. Terry led similar groups at Elysium and such Poly Conferences as Loving More since the 70s as well as attending those conducted by David Friedman. We will experience the kind of intimate verbal encounter which leads to a deeper understanding of each other and of ourselves. He will share with us the background of More House and how it became one of the longest lasting cooperative housing experiments of the twentieth century. He will also discuss how it continues to function today—yes, it's still out there! In the 70s, More House began as a series of group houses which offered sensuality/sexuality training under the name of More University. David Friedman was involved with and led Mark groups with that organization in the 70s.

1 pm Snacks and left overs to share

Sunday 2-3:30pm Eileen & David Maxfield ZEGG forum & Network For a New Culture Summer Camp
The Forum constitutes an artistic way of organizing sharing's, a stage for whatever is happening inside ourselves. Here one's true motivations, one's deep feelings, longings, ideas and emotions become public. This focus on transparency, sharing and clarifying unsolved situations of daily life make it an invaluable catalyst for one's own growth. But the Forum is also a unique kind of research model for the study of what constitutes a human being. <http://www.nfnc.org/sc/> for more info

Lady Slings the Booze* and other Spider Robinson Poly Delights

Lady Sally’s Place is a very upscale bordello featuring Artists who provide such services as unusual role play experiences, lusty sexual encounters, gentle cuddling with good music and international diplomacy thrown in. World Saving also on the menu. These Artists and the Lady herself are a kind of expanded family/intimate network as a group with some open marriages including dyads and triads among them.

Tesla visits regularly—yes, that Tesla! Lady Sally is the wife of Mike Callahan of the Callahan’s Crosstime Saloon series—clearly presented as a poly relationship with complete honesty between them. Spider has group marriages, telepathic groups, and Sentient Being combinations of all kinds in many of his books. Some of this is almost certainly autobiographical in spots. We will discuss his writings, his philosophy and how we can use them in our real-life poly relationships.

This is the time in the year when the veil between our world and the spirit world is the thinnest, and we can concentrate on contacting our loved ones who have passed away, and make Magick happen in our lives! Ealswythe has studied the Tarot and Palmistry, and she has also led many people through visualizations of their past lives. A firm believer that by trying to understand the things out there, that cannot be seen by “normal” vision, we can enhance our lives, she has also sought an understanding of the Spirit World, and how to communicate and receive messages from them. Currently, she has been studying the Quantum Theory to understand Parallel Universes. EXERPT FROM FIFTY YEARS OF POLYAMORY BY GLEN OLSON AND TERRY LEE BRUSSEL

...In 1967 an event took place in that was destined to shake American society to its foundations and cause not just isolated splinter groups, but huge segments of the population to pay attention, to wonder and to ultimately question their relationships- with themselves and with the people they loved.

“The Summer of Love” was the culmination of three very strong trends going on in America at the time. The Civil Rights Movement had been changing people's hearts all through the sixties, making activism respectable. The Human Potential Movement, coming from good old American philosophical and psychological roots had been quietly gaining momentum all decade with the message that you can change who you are, for the better. And the Beat culture of the fifties had turned into the Hippie movement of the sixties.

Human Awareness Institute founded by Stan and Helen and (later including Janet Dale --in a triad which lasted over quarter of a century) taught closeness to dyads, triads and morads from 1968 to present through their Sex, Love and Intimacy workshops. Family Synergy was the premier organization for multiply committed relationships in the 70s & 80s. More House and More University taught/demonstrated group living and multiply committed relationships from the late 60s to the present World Polyamory Association had yearly poly conferences for many years and showcased the Poly Reality tv show Polyamory: Married and Dating in 2012 Conference which was attended by many of the stars of that show. Such organizations as Sex Positive LA (founded January 17 2012), the LA local segment of Sex Positive World; and many local Poly Meetup Groups are more recent additions to the poly scene.

LET'S CREATE A BETTER FUTURE!

Much progress has been made by those involved in all kinds of alternative sexual practices during the first two decades of the 21st century. Gay marriage has been legalized in all states of the United States, despite the outspoken concern of some dissenters that if Gay Marriage were legalized, marriage to more than one spouse could be next (horrors!). Out of the closet Gays are allowed in the military, however, recent changes prohibit Trans-gender in the military. They have protection from job discrimination based on their sexuality.

Transgender persons have the right to a birth certificate (Passport, etc) reflecting their chosen gender. They have some protection from job discrimination. They are still fighting in some states for the right to use the restroom of their chosen gender—even those who are post op, which is ridiculous. Trans folks received their latest punch in the stomach when President Trump casually tweeted as Commander and Chief of the Armed Forces that they were banned from the military in any position. His excuses for this were so lame as to not even bear mentioning. The matter is now being investigated by the Department of Defense Committee.

Polyamory, our cause is also badly in need of our attention. Triads have had children taken from them simply because they were not a monogamous couple. In 1982, Art Tarlow and Terry Lee Brussel founded the Committee for the Rights of Children and Families to prevent such abuses of the Law. It had some success, though by 2002, the Department of Child Services was preventing poly people from having visits with their grandchildren for the crime of speaking out about their lifestyle on television talk shows. In Utah, today (2017), even a Handfasting ceremony (spiritual marriage to another while legally married) and/or cohabitation with someone other than one's legal spouse is illegal. That makes publicly committed triads illegal there as well as one man with several women which it is actually aimed at.

Will other states follow in Utah's footsteps?

Will we be doomed to exist in the closet anxiously trying to protect our children (and grandchildren) from being taken by the State?

Not if WE do something about it!

10% of the profits from this book will go to a legal fund for those experiencing discrimination effecting their right to child custody in any way as well as for the formulation of legislation forging new protections for polyamorist families on the edge of this challenging frontier...

The lawyer handling this fund is Elizabeth Yang. She herself is poly as well as being a family law specialist. Feel free to call her at 877-4-YANG-LAW or see her website www.yanglawoffice.com for assistance with any legal issues relating to your lifestyle.

Excerpts from a Poly Handfasting

The following are some excerpts from my Handfasting with Marcus in 2016. It was an attempt to become primary partners. That did not work well for either of us, but Marcus and I still live together as handfasted partners honoring our original joining in 2001 which we never broke. When our year and a day from the 2016 Handfasting was ended, we took the rings from the original Brading which we had been wearing on our left hands and put them on each other's right hands. Craig had already been becoming more and more important in my life and had shared water with me shortly before this time. Marcus and I both agreed he would be the right primary partner for me. Fortunately, that was also what Craig wanted. We are now a semi residential V triad. When Craig stays at our home, we all share a bed. Though Marcus rarely travels with Craig and me by his own choice, he is always welcome. Polyamory offers many choices.

Announcement:

Craig is moving in to our home on Penfield November of 2017. Craig Milo Rogers and Terry Lee Brussel will be married in a Jewish ceremony before friends, family and water kin April 28th, 2018.

Terry: The following words were inspired by, but are not taken verbatim from, Robert Heinlein's Stranger in a Strange Land

Paul: The ethics of sex is a thorny problem. Each of us is forced to grope for a solution we can live with in the face of a culture that fails to acknowledge other choices than the so-called moral one of eternal monopoly. Most of us know there's something wrong. And we behave in ways that satisfy more of our needs. But we then feel guilty and continue to support the status quo.

Marcus: Growing closer by sexual union, plurality into unity, logically has no place for monogamy. Since a shared-by-all sexual congress is basic to this creed — why expect it to be hidden? One hides what one is ashamed of but we are not ashamed, we glory in it. To duck behind closed doors would be a sop to the very code we have rejected.

Athena: Love is that condition in which the happiness of another person is essential to your own. The immature mind often confuses love and jealousy or assumes that the greater the jealousy the greater the love. I believe they're almost incompatible; one emotion hardly leaves room for the other. Both at once can produce an unbearable turmoil.

Marcus: Sex should be a means of happiness. The worst thing about the way most of our society handles sex is that we use it to hurt each other. It ought never to hurt; it should bring happiness, or at least, pleasure. The code says, "thou shall not covet thy neighbor's wife." The result? Reluctant chastity, adultery, jealousy, bitterness, blows and sometimes murder, broken homes and twisted children-and furtive little passes degrading to woman and man. Is this commandment ever obeyed? If a man swore on his own Bible that he refrained from coveting his neighbor's wife because the code forbade it, I would suspect either self-deception or subnormal sexuality. Any male virile enough to sire a child has coveted many women, whether he acts on it or not.

Paul: There is no need to covet my wife ... love her! There's no limit to her love, we have everything to gain - and nothing to lose but fear and guilt and hatred and jealousy. These things do not serve our highest purpose. It is much better to share joy than to fear it. The most complete joy is to share emotional, intellectual, physical, and spiritual ecstasy with someone you cherish and trust. Our Brothers get along together. They live in peace and happiness with no bitterness, no jealousy. Romantic physical love may be unique to this planet. If it is, the universe is a poorer place than it could be ... And while we-who-are-God are here, we will enjoy it and share it.

Glen: The joining of bodies with merging of souls in shared ecstasy, giving, receiving, delighting in each other is the source of all that makes this planet so rich and wonderful. Until a person, man or woman, has enjoyed this treasure bathed in the mutual bliss of minds linked as closely as bodies, that person is still virginal and alone as if he had never had sex.

Terry and Marcus (looking into each other's eyes): May we be as deep into each other's minds and souls as we are into each other's bodies.

There are many definitions of what it means to be a Water Brother. Here are some from Stranger in a Strange Land where the concept originated. Here water was used because the main character was raised on Mars where water was rare and life depended upon it. To share this life-giving substance was literally to share Life.

Paul: Water sharing is like being baptized . . . and like getting married.

Terry: It means you trust us and we trust you. We can tell you anything and you can tell us anything...and know that confidences will be kept.

Marcus: It means that we are partners, now and forever. Once done, it can never be broken.

Dreena (our newest waterbrother who Shared at the Live the Dream Passover Seder which she drove from Orange County to the Valley to support me though she is not Jewish: In this Story, the Character Mahmoud, Michael's first Water Brother, noted that Michael presented to him this group of Jubal, Anne, Jill, Mariam, and Dorcas as his new WaterBrothers. Mahmoud had just met all of them and was not really comfortable with any of them]. Because they were Michael's water brothers, Mahmoud had an obligation to them more binding than that owed to the sons of one's father's brother. Mahmoud had to accept them as his family. Mi Familia es Su Familia, My Family is your family, including all the problems and delights that may come with them. This is Called Sharing in fullness.

Terry: 'May you never thirst, never hunger' is one acknowledgment commonly used among members of the real Church of All Worlds which is based on the one in Heinlein's novel. In Stranger, this is a binding promise to see to it personally that one's water kin shall never hunger, be thirsty, nor lack for shelter. Among most who offer these words in ritual, they are far less binding. In most rituals, the sharing of water is simply the recognition that we are all brothers and sisters in the earth, Gaia. Being a bit more traditional, I personally will not use water for such a ritual unless I do mean the words literally. I replace it with juice. I may even verbally state that the sharing we are doing is not a sharing in fullness. In my own inner Nest, the sharing of Water has meanings varying from person to person by their choice. There are those who have chosen to accept my water brothers as their own and those who have chosen to share only with me and to share separately, or not, with each of my other water brothers. Others have decided to change to this meaning after the original sharing. Some have even chosen to break the bond of water brotherhood--which they can do, on their side, without anyone disincorporating as a result. In essence, we are none of us Martians nor characters in a science fiction story. Each of us does the best we can to be true to ourselves and those we care for. Those present who are members of our Nest, in whatever way they choose to define that, will be asked to come forward and share with us today. We hope you will feel comfortable accepting that invitation.

Glen: Will those persons present who are Water Brothers of our Nest please come forward at this time to renew the sharing of water.

A water filled chalice is passed around. Participants may say what they wish to each other.

Terry's vows to Paul: I promise you my love and my respect. I shall hear your words and grok your meaning to the best of my ability, considering your side of a question even when it disagrees with my own. I shall do my utmost to offer you love without jealousy, affection without demand, and a joining of the essences of Who We Are — in the Light.

I promise you my support in growing to the highest level of which you are capable in this life — physically, mentally, emotionally, spiritually and financially. I promise to honor your love of freedom and commitment to making the world a better and freer place. Though we are no longer primary partners, you are my Brother. I shall always love you whether you choose to share sexual intimacy with me or not. I delight in that part of our relationship when you do choose it. I ask that you honor as I do our intimacy as a deeply loving spiritual sharing as well as a physical one. I will always consider your needs along with my own in our agreements making my very best effort to be sure that they are scrupulously fair to both of us and to those we care for.

Paul's vows to Terry and Marcus: I acknowledge our long history and honor that which truly serves our needs and those of whom we choose to relate. I promise you my support in growing to the highest level of which we are capable in this life — physically, mentally, emotionally, spiritually and financially. Though we are no longer primary partners, you are my Brother; I shall always love you. I shall endeavor to take joy in your delights, pride in your successes and care to find the highest good for all of us. I shall care for you and admire your unique talents and creativity. I shall continue to enjoy the affection we have for each other and will respect your choices. I will always hear you out and respect your intention and dedication to making the dream more real.

I wear the ring from our original Braiding on my right hand in recognition that even as we change and grow on our own separate paths, our lives continue to be intertwined in ways multiplying joy and diminishing sorrow for all of us. WE ARE FAMILY
